Club Baccara is a small hotel styled timeshare. The decorating style uses dark wood, white walls and much tile giving it an overall feel of Mexico. It is conveniently located on the main highway from the airport in the hotel zone. The Flamingo Plaza is directly across the street and there are many choices for dining in the area. The bus stop is about 150 yards from the front of the hotel.

The rooms are clean and fresh smelling. Outside the bedroom was a large patio balcony with its own hot tub. There is a gorgeous view overlooking the ocean about 20 yards from the crashing waves.

There is an all inclusive package offered. It allows guests unlimited food and beverage. The purchaser could eat at Club Baccara, the Avalon Grand Resort or at the Avalon Reef resort on Isla Mujeres a small island off the coast of Cancun. It seems to be a good value for the cost.

Mark Nayman indicates there is a nice stretch of beach there, a little narrow but not too bad. The resort location is great, across the street from the Flamingo Shopping Mall, Planet Hollywood, Pat O'Briens and Outback Steakhouse. Next door is the Flamingo Resort and up the street is the Avalon Grand, owned by the same group. There is a bar/restaurant right at Baccara called Studebaker's and you'll know why when you see the two or three classic old Studebaker cars parked in the garage, all with Indiana license plates.

The rooms are all built to various shapes, sizes and configurations. Housekeeping is very good and maintenance appears to be excellent. Some rooms must have an ocean view, but not the ones we saw. There are small mini-kitchens, no oven, but a 2 burner, appliances and a microwave. The rooms did seem a little dark to me. There is a medium sized swimming pool down by the beach that is elevated from beach level by a deck.
